ORGANIZATION AND PARTS OF THE # MY .-So many persons, unacquainted with the organization of an army, are making inquiries upon that subject, that we copy from the and Toilet articles; Perfumery; Toilet Soaps; Po-Cincinnati Gazette the following outline of its elements, as recognized in the French school and in our own, so far as we have had

A company is the unit of an army, and is supposed to average, on the war basis, one and accurately compounded. hundred men, officers included. The general | ap 4 rule for the organization of such a company gives one captain, two lieutenants, five sergrants and four corporals and eighty-five men. Formerly, each company had an ensign, who carried the flag; but his place is now supplied by the color sergeants. There is one more sergeant than corporals, the first sergeant being called the orderly sergeant, and is, next to the captain, the most important man in the company-carrying the books | in small papers at 64 and 10 ets., and in bulk when of the company, and calling the roll morning required. The company is formed, when in column, into two platoons and four sections, each platoon commanded by a lieutenant, and each section by a sergeant.

A regiment is regularly composed of ten companies, or two battalions; a battalion being half a regiment, composed of five companies-one of them called a light or rout com- ward the amount they wish to invest in postage pany, intended in regular service to operate | stamps or gold, and we will forward them seed by outside of the heavy columns as flanking parties, guards, etc.

The officers of a regiment, independent of company officers, are a colonel, lieut. colonel, two majors, adjutant, quartermaster, and commissary. Each separate body of troops must have a commissary and quartermaster, but in a large army they are apportioned to regiments or brigades. A regiment, when constituted, will be formed thus: 1 colonel, 1 lieut. colonel, 1 adjutant, 1 quartermaster, 1 commissary, 2 majors, 10 captains, 20 lieutenants, 50 sergeants, 40 corporals, and 850 private men-making 975, but in reality there are some others; each company has regularly a drummer and fifer, which make a regimental band of 20, besides the drum major .--Then the regiment, when full, is made up regularly to 1,000 men.

A brigade should be composed of two regiments, a squadron of cavalry and a corps of field artillery. If these were all full, a complete brigade operating alone, would, in our service, or in the French, make 2,400 men.

A division is composed of two brigades, with additional corps of cavalry and artillery, making in our army, including the whole staff and music, about 5,000 men. This is the | Sage, Black Pepper, Oil Lemon, Super Carb. Soda, highest element of organization in our service; but in France, as they organize immense armies, there is one other.

The corps is composed of two or more divisions, frequently of four or five. The corps is, in the French service, properly commanded by a field marshal-an officer unknown complete army in itself.

In Napoleon's march on Russia, he had eight or ten of these corps in active servicemaking a field army of from 250,000 to 300,-(900 men. From the elements we have given, it will be seen that however large the army may be, it is so organized as to be perfect in all its parts, and moves with exact order and discipline. In the field all orders and operations are carried on through the staff of the army, and when we come to active service. the staff is the most important part of the army; for this being a vast machine, of which each part is perfectly obedient to and direct Toilet Powders, Tooth Picks, Kerosene Oil and ted by the head, it is evident that all must Lamps, Ethereal Oil, Linsced Oil, and paints. Redepend on the skill, ability and discernment of the staff through which it acts. It is in vain that Scott or any great general commands, if the staff officers are incompetent.

The staff consists of the aids, the adjutant general, the engineer, the quartermaster, and commissary generals. Through the adjutant general all orders are conveyed to each particular part. By the quartermaster general, all transportations and vehicles, and supplies: by the engineer the topography of the country is thoroughly examined, the practicability of passes determined, fortifications built or attached. Then the staff of an army becomes its eyes, and all its faculties, the general simply deciding the move- measured nearly 6 feet around and weighed 60 ments of the army on the facts and elements | pound, for sale by | HENRY COOK & CO. thus furnished.

Advice to Volunteers .- How to Prepare for the Campaign .- A writer, who signs himself "An Old Soldier," gives the following advice to young soldiers:

1. Remember that in a campaign more men die from sickness than by the bullet. 2. Line your blanket with one thickness of brown drilling. This adds but four ounces in weight, and doubles the 3. Buy a small India rubber blanket (only

$1 50) to lay on the ground or to throw over your shoulders when on guard duty during a rain storm. Most of the eastern troops are provided with these. Straw to lie on is not always to be had. 4. The best military hat in use is the light colored soft felt; the crown being sufficiently high to allow space for air over the brain .-You can fasten it up as a continental in fair weather, or turn it down when it is wet or very sunny. 5. Let your beard grow, so as to protect the throat and lungs.

6. Keep your entire person clean; this preyears tovers and bowel complaints in warm climates. Wash your body each day, if possible. Avoid strong coffee and oily meat.-Gen. Seatt said that the too free use of these together with neglect in keeping the skin clean, cost many a soldier his life in Mexi-
